PALMETTO SCHOLARS ACADEMY
Palmetto Scholars Academy is a South Carolina charter school that serves a high and talented student population in grades 6-12, located in North Charleston on the old West Point. PISA is a South Carolina-based charter management organization.
Student Spotlight Experiments Program
This exciting opportunity is a feature of the student Spotlight Experiments Program during the spring of 2013. All students write laboratory proposals and research papers to gain one of the proposed opportunities to the International Space Station. A team of seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth graders created the winning experiment. This is a wonderful addition to their...
The team is composed entirely of high-achieving students at Palmetto Scholars Academy.
This experiment will go to the International Space Station on December 8, 2013, and will be the first flight.
Mission Design Curriculum
Mission Design is a new high school class at PISA in the 2013-14 school year. In collaboration with the College of Charleston, students in this Mission Design class will complete a variety of activities, assignments, and projects as part of the program. Students will be required to complete a variety of projects, including a research paper, a presentation, and a final project. The program will be designed and implemented by PISA and the University of Charleston.
